A Bit of History

MEME was created by an individual that decided to run the project like most meme-coins, pumped it, dumped it, and then abandoned it. This left the community in a rather difficult situation.

Most tokens are simply left for dead after the first pump and dump, but MEME survived because the community saw potential in it and together, started a Telegram group to revive it. Pretty quickly people got interested in the project and the community started to grow exponentially.

After reviving the token, creating an official site, and all of the necessary infrastructure, the community began to question where to go from here. Liquidity from the original developers was all burned and the contract was renounced. This has set the foundation to build from,

MEME coin is on a mission to revive old memes and the community spirit of crypto.

Conclusion and future vision

After the community picked up the project, it immediately became a meme-coin sensation. But we're not stopping at simply being a meme, we have much bigger ambitions.

The reality is MEME cannot be sustainable simply based on hype and for it to survive we are building a recognizable brand, supported by its community. We all have contributed time and resources to create music, memes, official merchandise, NFTs, applications and much more.

Further, MEME's goal is not just making the token valuable and its holders monetarily happy, but sharing its success with those who need it most.

MEME is here to stay, if you follow official announcements you will not be disappointed with the constant stream of new developments taking place.
